Salus University Names New Director of Physician Assistant Studies Program

Daniel Pavlik, DMS, PA-C.

Elkins Park, Pa. — Daniel Pavlik, DMS, PA-C, was recently named director of the Physician Assistant (PA) Studies program at Salus University. He succeeds Donna Agnew, MSPAS, PA-C, DFAAPA.

Dr. Pavlik, associate professor and director of didactic education for the PA Studies program at Salus, joined the PA department in 2016. Dr. Pavlik, along with other faculty members, helped rebuild the University's PA program into one of the top programs in the country. In his new role, he wants to concentrate on providing the best training for PA students at Salus.

“We want to continue to improve our reputation throughout the country so that we continue to recruit great candidates for admissions,” he said.

Originally from Warminster, Pennsylvania, Dr. Pavlik graduated from La Salle University with a bachelor’s degree in biology, went on to earn a master’s degree in PA Studies from Arcadia University and then completed his doctor of Medical Sciences at Lincoln Memorial University in Harrogate, Tennessee.
