Salus University to Host Virtual Open House

Salus University will host a virtual open house for prospective students interested in the audiology and speech-language pathology healthcare professions Saturday, April 24 at 10 a.m.

Elkins Park, Pa. — Salus University will host its spring open house virtually Saturday, April 24 from 10 a.m. – 12 p.m. Prospective students are invited to explore the University's Doctor of Audiology (AuD) and Master's in Speech-Language Pathology (SLP) programs from the convenience of home.

The online event will include:

- A brief overview of graduate studies at Salus
- Information about navigating the application process
- The opportunity to talk to faculty and current students as well as tour the University's campus and state-of-the-art clinical facilities

In addition to being the largest stand-alone audiology program in the U.S., the Salus Osborne College of Audiology (OCA) is the only college dedicated solely to the study of audiology nationwide. Graduates of the program leave with more than 2,500 clinical hours in patient care settings.

According to the U.S. Bureau of Labor and Statistics, employment of audiologists is projected to grow 13 percent from 2019 to 2029, with SLPs rising 25 percent. The SLP growth rate also aligns with U.S. News & World Report's Best Jobs, ranking the profession No. 7 with a median salary of $79,000 and more than 162,000 available jobs.
